While I enjoy racing locally in the Duck Island Yacht Club Wednesday night series, I have also sailed in larger programs in Miami, Charleston, Annapolis, and offshore during the Newport to Bermuda race.

Teaching sailing at Brewer Pilots Point Marina is about confidence building. It is important as a teacher to build your student's skill set while allowing mistakes to be made so that when the instructor is not there in the future, the student does not have anxiety about what could happen. I enjoy working with new boaters, and developing self-confidence in adults to get out on the water and enjoy their boats is very rewarding. I also love to see students from the junior program that started at 8 years old come up through the program and eventually race against me as young adults!
